POSTER P1.05

Immediate Removable Partial Denture For Aesthetic Anterior Maxillary Tooth Rehabilitation

Benita Aryani Hendrata*, Paulus Budi Teguh

*Undergraduate Programe, Faculty of Dentistry, Hang Tuah University Surabaya

Department of Prosthodontic, Faculty of Dentistry, Hang Tuah University Surabaya

ABSTRACT

Background: An anterior tooth extraction can cause aesthetic and psychological problems. An immediate removable partial denture could be the choice of aesthetic rehabilitation because it's inserted immediately following the natural tooth extraction. Case and case management: A 41-years-old woman, a teacher, wasn't confident with her #22 tooth microdontia and malpositioned. In order to rehabilitated her aesthetic problem could be done by immediate #22 tooth extraction. Removable Partial Denture preparation was done-by removing the #22 tooth. The denture was inserted immediately after the extraction. After denture was inserted, at the 24-hours, 3 days, 1 week, and 1 month should be evaluated to knew the bone resorption process and whether the Immediate Removable Partial Denture should be relined or not. Conclusions: The Immediate Removable Partial Denture provides an aesthetic rehabilitation and increases the patient's self-confidence because the patient has no edentulous period.

POSTER P1.06

Periodontal Surgery In Gingival Recession With Subepithelial Connective Tissue Graft Technic

Erianti Dewi Utami

Department of Periodontics, Faculty of Dentistry, Prof. Dr. Moestopo (B) University Jakarta

ABSTRACT

Background: Periodontal tissue is a connective tissue that surrounding the tooth and consists of gingiva, cementum, periodontal ligament and alveolar process. The periodontal disease affecting the soft tissue surrounding the tooth without any alveolar loss, periodontal ligament or cementum and it is called as gingivitis. If it is untreated as soon as possible then it will grow fast and infected the alveolar process resulting periodontitis. Gingival Recession is defined as the apical displacement of the gingival margin. Gingival recession showing first step in cemental damage, the exposure of the dentinal tubuli, causing pain and discomfort. Periodontal surgery is the continuing treatment in gingiva. Subepithelial connective tissue graft have been highly predictable in gingival recession therapy with respect to a high percentage of wound healing of the connective tissue.

Keywords: gingival recession, subepithelial connective tissue graft, periodontal surgery
